● Half-Colombian Roxy
Music guitarist Phil Manzanera teams up with Colombian singer Lucho Brieva for an intriguing set of songs about a couple of corronchos, hicks from the Colombian backwoods.
Combining earthy Latin-folk flavours with numbers by Bob Dylan and Chrissie Hynde, and touches of Manzanera's trademark crystal-toned guitar, this is a large cut above your average rock star vanity project. MH

Roxy Music's guitarist Phil Manzanera's mother was Colombian, and this collaboration with the artist Lucha Brieua explores the coastal Corroncho culture. There are shades of Roxy here too: the drum machine intro that bursts into Willie Colón's "Lowrider", lush bossa guitar straight out of Avalon. Robert Wyatt plays trumpet, and Annie Lennox and Chrissie Hynde provide muted backing vocals. The Cuban pianist Aldo López Gavilán flows behind Manzanera's guitar rhythms.
